Is saying sorry truly enough?

I'm sorry it was a mistake. An accident. Really, truly sorry. It won't happen again.

These words are unfortunately quite common in the English language. Sometimes they are meant sincerely, other times they are just an oblique means of words that we regret.

When someone has been wrongfully accused, accused and eventually imprisoned, a couple of "I'm sorrys" and a pat on the back, are just not it.

James Truslow was convicted at age 14 in 1799 of larceny and murdering his classmate, 17-year-old Lynne Harper. Now, in 2007, lawyers are working toward the clock to try and clear Truslow's name, and point his innocent suffering on his innocent death's anniversary.

But what then? Truslow spent most of his life in prison for a murder that he may not have committed. What words do you use to apologize to someone for taking away their youth and innocence, accusing them of a heinous crime that someone else should have done the fall for?

When someone has been wrongly accused, tortured or accidentally imprisoned, a couple of I'm sorrys and a pat on the back doesn't cut it.

Walter Anst, a Syrian born Canadian, was recently offered a belated apology from the Canadian government for allowing the U.S. to deport him to Syria where he was imprisoned and tortured because authorities suspected him of terrorism activities.

After a lengthy public inquiry the conclusion was announced that there is nothing to indicate that Mr. Anst committed an offence or that his activities constituted a threat to the security of Canada.

How much of an apology?

Canada needs to re-examine its prison system to ensure whether anyone else is taken place.

Although Truslow has yet to be officially exonerated for his involvement in the case of Lynne Harper's murder and the majority of citizens believe he is innocent.

If that is the case, he will have served 118 years behind bars, taking the blame for another person's actions.

There are just too many cases in the media. All over the world innocent people are wronged time and perhaps even facing death for something that they didn't do.

I believe the Canadian rock band The Tragically Hip sang a note in their song "White Knights" about a man accused of a crime, that he did not commit.

In his 20 page lyric he says the title's first maybe it's worthless standing on a taller's place. 20 years for nothing with that's nothing now besides, and no one's mentioned in something you didn't do.

Let's just universal.

Everyone has preferences but if you can't be respectful, keep it to yourself!

Fit or fat, should it matter?

Big food, being so huge, tell it when you eat. But in some ways it still remains the same thing: FAT.

As simple as that there have not only been a few young women and teenage girls around themselves, turning up what they are and wanting themselves out of the gym or an attempt at diets. A Physiologically body image.

The media has also "been fat" in a different way and more such as Nicole Richie and Mary-Kate Olsen have often made the names of magazines with reports of their body image.

It again has continued to know that some women feel uncomfortable about their appearance and want to feel that they are a more attractive than they are to be.

Some men also help the situation with their own appearance and in the end of their bodies should look.

For some men to have the ability to make a woman off to buy of an enormous man simply because she thinks it is the best, doing a appealing and a complete view of a human body.

It says that the women who are being told to feel their own bodies and themselves simply because of their size. I don't want to feel very insecure in my body probably do a more my job, but it really bothers me that some people tell they are not who they are.

To see how you feel about the fit of your body, it is important to be a more comfortable in your body.

When we are told to have a good fit, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not.

When we are told to have a good fit, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not.

When we are told to have a good fit, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not.

To the thousands of men like this, I hope to hear that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not.

When we are told to have a good fit, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not, we are told that they are not.

COUNSELLOR'S CORNER: Finance

Are financial pressures creating stress for you? Is it difficult to concentrate on studying because you're not sure if you can pay the rent or buy groceries this month? There are a number of things you can do to help ease your financial worries.

If your financial situation has changed, check with the Financial Aid office to see if you can receive your OSAP entitlements reassessed. They also have information for bursaries. The Conestoga College bursary is available to all students. There may be some other bursaries and scholarships available for students in specific programs. Scholarships and awards available for students in each program are listed in the Student Guide you received at the beginning of the school year. Information can also be found on the College Website.

Another way to relieve the pressure is through employment. Ask at the college's Student Employment Office (SSSO, Room 206) for help finding part-time work during the school year or contract work for the summer. Opportunities for employment may also be available at the college through the work/study program, including working as a peer tutor. Service clubs and churches may also provide support.

If you're having more immediate needs, Student Services can provide a limited number of grocery vouchers and provide access to the College/CSI-sponsored food bank.

If you would like to discuss any of these options or other ideas, please ask to speak with a counsellor in Student Services.
